Printing

Do you know how much you are spending each month to print or copy a document? If you are not leveraging your organizations cumulative purchasing power and standardizing your printer fleet you might be spending more on toner and service than you have to.

Managing a printer fleet when faced with five or six vendors providing devices, consumables and services can be a daunting if not impossible task. Why store half a dozen different types of toner and train your technicians and users on a large number of devices when you can standardize?

A managed print services contract will save you time, money and storage space. A 2003 IDC study showed that organizations who implemented managed print services saved on acquisition, consumables, unscheduled maintenance, and installation costs. All combined the study indicated a 23 percent average overall savings. These organizations also experienced a 40 percent reduction in IT help desk calls related to printing.
